About Southall Black Sisters

Originally set up in 1979, Southall Black Sisters (SBS) has established itself as an iconic organisation working in West London, but with a national reach and reputation for its landmark legal interventions, its targeted campaigns to bring about changes in policy for the benefit of Black and minoritised women, and its unique approach to casework and advocacy.

In 1983, SBS set up a not for profit, advice, campaigning, resource, and advocacy centre for Black and minoritised women, with a particular focus on the needs of South Asian women. SBS's casework has highlighted flaws in community and state responses to the needs of Black and minoritised communities, which have often ignored the plight of the most vulnerable, especially women and children. Our casework focuses on violence against women and girls, including specific forms of violence including honour-based crimes, forced marriage and related problems such as religious and cultural pressures to conform, racism, homelessness, housing, matrimonial, child custody and immigration matters. Our work by its very nature must address issues of multiple discrimination, involving the simultaneous experience of race, sex, class, caste and other forms of discrimination.
